A Familiar Conversation with the President-His Views of the Situation-The Condition of Affairs of the South - His Duties and Purposes Under the Reconstruction Acts The Dangers of a Conflict of Races How He Looks Upon Our Tennesse Affairs-How He Regards Impeachment, etc., etc. On the second inst., Mack, of the Cincinnati Commercial, called upon President Johnson and had a familiar conversation with him, from his report of which, we take the following very interesting ex-

I told Mr. Johnson what, in my judg ment, were the views of leading Southern men on the subject of reconstruction under the military act; that the mode which was being adopted by a certain class of worthless and arresponsible men to secure negro | from any hand in the matter. "O pshaw, votes would engender strife between the negroes and whites in the South, and lead Jeff. Davis?" and he smiled again-to endless trouble, if not war and blood-shed; that my own observations led me to run off with the manuscript of his believe that the negroes were being taught by these low-lived fellows to look upon the whites as their natural enemies, and that I did not see how, with that idea once prevalent among the negroes, the two races could live together in the South. "They can't do it," said Mr. Johnson. "A war of races is inevitable if such a state of affairs goes on. People may laugh at the idea of a war of races now, but it will be brought about by such doctrines as these." He then remarked that negro suffrage would have been brought about by State action—that it was inevitable, and would not have been resisted by the Southern States if left to themselves. It might not have come as soon as it has been forced upon them by Congress; but, said he, "it would have come, and quite as soon as the negroes were fit for it." In reply to a question, I told the President that I had seen very few men in the South who were in any true sense of the word Rebels, and that these few were men who had not been in the Rebel army; that I thought most of what was called "dislovalty" was the effect of the unjust and ungenerous treatment of the South by Congressional legislation since the close of the war. He replied that he did not believe that there were many Rebeles in the South, and that especially the men who had fought against the Union were not Rebels now, and had no desire or intention to rebel

He seemed to be very daeply interested Leave Nashville for Washington, New York, Atlanta, Macon, Montgomery, Augusta, Savannab, New Orleans and Mobile at 5:15 a. M. and 5:15 p. M., arriving in Chattanooga at 1:50 p. M. and 5:00 a. M.; both Trains making close connections at Chattanooga with East Tennessee & disorgia and Western & Atlantic Railroad Trains. Returning, leave Chattanooga at 5:10 p. M. and 7:50 p. M., upon arrival of E. T. & Ga. and W. & A. Trains, arriving in Nachville at 4:30 a m: and 3:50 p. M., upon arrival of E. T. & Ga. and W. & A. Trains, arriving in Nachville at 4:30 a m: and 3:50 p. M. and didn't deny it, and who, as I learned at Rome, Georgia, while there was an original and foul-mouthed secssionist.

"Oh, yes," said he, "you mean Musons? In regard to the Brownlow militia, he said he had received a bundred petitions com the best people of Tennessee, asking him to send United States troops there to protect them against the outrages now be ng committed by this "State guard." asked him if he could, under the constitution, send troops to Tennessee without the request of the Governor or Legislature He replied that that was a difficult ques tion which he had not yet determined. He certainly could send troops there on reruiting service, and station them at Knoxille, Nashville, Chattanooga, and such soints, and if any disturbance occurred while these troops were there it would be the duty of the commanding officer to use them in suppressing it. He feared very unch that Brownlow's militia would pro oke riot and bloodshed. I told him that was what they were organized for, and the only question was, whether, when they got ready to fight, they should have armed sol liers or unarmed citizens to shoot at. I thought the best way would be to regard the militia as an insurrection and send oldiers to suppress it, and clean it out He didn't know, he said, what was best be done; he wanted to see the peace of the State preserved, but didn't know exactly how best to preserve it. He regarded the State government of Pennessee as the worst despotism he had ever heard of-a military despotism in its worst form-and about the meanest desoot he ever heard of at the head of it. iome men make even a despotism a respeciable sort of government, said he, but Brownlow can't get up a decent despotism. He believed the people of Tennessee would-live quietly and obey the laws and constitution if let alone, and they did not need any militia there at all, and that half the trouble in that State was brought about by Northern men going down there to stir up strife and make capital out of it.

The conversation next turned on General Sheridan and the conduct of affairs in Lou-isiana. The President spoke with great warmth and earnestness when he referred to this subject. At times his voice rose high enough for an audience of five hundred, though I was the only person in the room, and was sitting within two feet of him, "Now," said he, "General Sheridan says he had to remove Governor Wells because he was an impediment in the way of reconstruction. He doesn't say how he was an impediment; he doesn't say in what way he had obstructed him in his official duties, but merely says he is an impediment, and removes him. Well, how much better has he got along since he removed him? Has that helped him any? * I can't see that it has. And again, suppose I should replace Wells, how would that obstruct the execution of this law? These are questions which no one has attempted to answer." A little later he said "They have talked about my putting apediments in the way of the execution this law. I have done nothing of the kind, and don't intend to-never thought | But I do not feel at liberty to reject the of doing it. They have spoken of the Attorney General's opinion as an obstruction, That's all nonsense. It's no such thing, The removal of civil officers doesn't assist the execution of this bill at all. It has nothing to do with it."

I then told him that Mr. Wilson had prepared a bill to offer in the Senate, giving the military commanders the power to remove all civil officers, or, rather, vaeating all civil offices and authorizing the military commanders to fill them by appointment, re-appointment or election. "Well," said he, "that won't help reastruction at all. The few officers that law one way or the other, and it would be a good deal better to let men serve out their | in the approaching election, the people of term of office, and, when they run out, or Tennessee will be once more free, prosper der an election to fill them."

I spoke of General Sheridan's orders and | with which we have now to contend shall lispatches as insubordinate, and such as the succeed in fastening upon us and our people of the North ought not to applaud; that the same state of affairs during the war might have led to incalculable evil in the army, and that it was just as if General | which will leave no hope of our future en-Meade should have telegraphed to Mr. Lancoln that if Grant's policy was carried out, the army of the Potomac would soon be surrendered to General Lee. "That's happiness would most earnestly desire to just about it," said the President, " and the people ought to see that encouraging such hings is bringing the office of President into disrespect, no matter what they may been invited, and be assured that I shall think of me." He said nothing whatever not relax my efforts to answer the wishes against Sheridan, unless what I have just | and expectations of my Conservative felrelated be viewed in that light, but I could low-citizens, until the last day of the Coneasily me from his manner that he felt very gressional canvass shall have drawn to a keenly the attempts of that military chief-

tempt. Just here perhaps I may as well state that I have very good anthority for setting at rest all anxiety on the subject of Sheridan's removal. Nothing of the kind will be attempted; and if any of the "Generals commanding" in the South want political promotion, they must seek it in son other way than by trying to get the Presi dent to tread on their coat tails. He won't

Referring to the subject of impeachment, which I had introduced in some remarks as to what Congress would attempt at the resent session, the President asked me is he Judiciary Committee had had another meeting, or had made up its report yel. I told him I thought it held its last meeting to-day, (Tuesday) and that it was under stood that its members were divided; four for impeachment, three for censure and two for acquittal. He smiled at the idea of a "censure" from political opponents, and thought that it might be kept as a standing report for all administrations opposed to Congress. I asked him if he had read reeley's testimony, published that day in the Tribune, No, he said, he had not, and asked me what it was about. I told him that it related entirely to the bailing of Jeff Davis, and entirely exonerated him said he, "what had I do with the bailing of testimony and furnished it to the public through the Tribune and the Commercial that it would do good in showing to the country the style of testsmony they have been taking. He laughed again and said, "I wish they had published it all as they took it down. Of course I don't know what they've got against me, but I know what the facts are, and I'm not afraid of them." I asked him if he knew the character of some of the witnesses brought against him such as Baker's detectives. He said he did not, and I inferred from the way he said it that he didn't care much who they were. I told him's few incidents in the career of his "great prosecutor," Mr. Ashey-various historic and biographic matters connected with the Toledo member. come quite as soon as it ought to have He laughed very heartily and said, "That man seems to be very strangely infatnated about some things; I can't understand him at all"-and then laughed again, and added "but perhaps he means well enough Mr. Johnson had heard that afternoon that Stanley Matthews, of Cincinnati, had been ammoned before the Judiciary Commit ee, and asked me if I knew what the object was. I told him I did not; that I had seen Col. Matthews in Washington, but hadn't earned his mission here. I asked him what Colonel Matthews could possibly have know about him. He said he didn't know inless the Judiciary Committee wanted to go back to the time when he (Johnson was Provisional Governor of Tennessee Matthews was then Proyost Marshal of Nashville. I replied to this, that all in the affairs of Tennessee, and listened attentively to what I told him of my Bingham during the last session of the e impeached for what he had done before e became President, and that Bingham very promptly replied by calling Ashley : "That was a pretty sharp answer,

My own impressions, as the result of the nterview, are these: That the President, whatever may be his opinions of the conthationality or the propriety of the mili tary law, never had any other purpose with elerence to it than that of enforcing t justly and properly; that if he feels a little vexed when he ands Major Generals who never read a law book, running a tilt with uch a lawyer as Attorney General Stanberry, on the interpretation of a statute, he not much to blame; that he will not and aight not to allow Brownlow's militia to reate bloodshed in Tennessee; and that he is very little concerned about the impeach aent, which he evidently regards as a big

San Louis Potosi papers contain the correspondence between Maximilian and Juarez. The first is a letter from Maximilian, dated May 25. In case his counsel did not arrive in time to prepare for his defense, he requested time to arrange his private affairs. To this Juarez promptly re-plied that the time should be allowed. The next from Maximilian is dated May 27th, asking that the supreme government issue an order allowing his connel to leave the city of Mexico, which was under siege, and also desiring to speak personally with Juarez upon grave affairs and important to the country. Juarez gave the order for the exit from the city of the parties named, but as to the interview, that could not be granted, considering the distance which separated them and the ends of justice. Everything fitting as to Maximilian's private affairs should however be done. The Herald's Charleston special says General Sickles has postponed the period of registration until definite action is taken by Congress on the subject, declaring who are and who are not entitled to register. The Times' special says: The Treasury Department has closed its investigation in the Major Whittaker Sub-Treasury defalcation in New Orleans, and indictments have been found against both of the accused parties, which will be tried at the coming Darrel presiding. The government has thus far secured from the assets of the defaulters a sum amounting to about $600,000, or one-half the defalcation.

REDUCTION OF RATES

We are gratified at being able to state that the very large increase in the number of our Daily and Tri-Weekly subscribers enables us to reduce the price of subcaription to these editions. We do so the more cheerfully because the nacessities of the people, in the impoverished condition of our stricken section, requires such concessions as can be reasonably made in their interests. From and after the lat January, therefore, our TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION WILL BE
